

Water, Water everywhere...

...when I do the work!"

"MY FARMER friends tell me that the most important single job I do on the farm is the supplying of running water through an automatic electric water system.

In the house, running water means city conveniences and comforts for the kitchen, the bathroom, the laundry. On the farm, water under pressure makes increased farm production possible at a great saving in labor. When plenty of water is available, cows give more milk; hens lay more eggs; hogs and beef cattle put on more weight. And garden watering may spell the difference between success and failure during dry spells!

A recent survey in Virginia showed that average farm families used to spend about 77 ten-hour days per year to pump and carry 138 tons of water. Today, an electric water system will supply an abundance of water under pressure for less than one dollar per month for electricity!

For an adequate installation, good planning requires checking the source of water, type and capacity of the pump, and piping to your local dealer, county agent or one of our representatives.
